

Be Still and Know

Words: Rosa Maud Turner

Music: Robert Collister

When clouds are hanging low and drear
And earth's illusive mists are near;
When tempest torn our way and dim,
Let thought awake and rise to Him:

Lift up the heart in faith above,
Be still and know that God is Love.
Lift up the heart in faith above,
Be still and know that God is Love.

When in the wilderness we roam,
And far away seems God, and home,
The valley's shadows fearsome, near,
The road we travel dimmed with fear;

Lift up the thought above the sod,
Be still and know that Love is God.
Lift up the thought above the sod,
Be still and know that Love is God.

We need not cry with anxious fear,
Nor restless, pace the pathway drear;
We need not doubt, though clouds are grey
Sunshine will chase them all away;

And from our hearts the gloom will fall,
Be still and know that Love is All.
And from our hearts the gloom will fall,
Be still and know that Love is All.

Lift up the thought above the sod,
Be still and know that Love is God.
Lift up the thought above the sod,
Be still and know that Love is God
